Florida Keys

Vacation Home Rental Research

Delivered July 2019
Purpose. The purpose of conducting the Florida Keys 2019 Vacation Home Rental Research was to better understand prospects’ decision-making process when considering which accommodations to choose (specifically vacation home rentals) when traveling for leisure—especially to the Florida Keys.

Target Travelers. This research was conducted among a nationwide general population cell of consumers who have taken a beach vacation in the past 5 years, and have either rented a vacation home near the beach or are open to doing so within the next 2 years. Throughout this presentation, these are referred to as Target Travelers.

Sample. A total of 1,000 responses were collected for this research, providing for a maximum margin of error of +/-3.1% at a 95% confidence Interval. This includes 739 respondents who have rented a vacation home in the past and 261 who have not, but are open to doing so in the future.
United States Households
According to the U.S. Census Bureau there are 120 million households in the country.

Beach Vacations in the Past 5 Years
Approximately 63% report having taken a leisure trip or getaway to a beach destination in the past 5 years.

Rented a Beach Vacation Home in the Past
Our research indicates that 74% of those who have visited a beach destination have rented a vacation home on the beach at some point in the past. The remaining 26% are open to doing so in the next 2 years.

Vacation Rental Target Market
This provides for an overall incidence of approximately 30% of U.S. Households (or 36M) who fall into the Target Traveler segment in this study.
The vacation home rental market is becoming more formidable nationwide.

- Nationwide, Airbnb lodging supply has exploded over the past decade largely because of its appeal to consumers’ increasing demand for authentic lodging experiences and it is a lodging category that benefited by an initial lack of regulation.

- The vacation home rental is challenging in South Florida because landlords and property managers can arguably make an average of nearly 40% percent more renting entire homes to tourists on Airbnb than renting to locals.¹ Thus, there is considerable financial incentive for doing so.

- As one might expect, the larger the demand for vacation home rentals, the more of an impact this lodging category has upon traditional hotel revenues.

- According to a recent study published by Florida State University, every 1% increase in the number of Airbnb properties resulted in a decrease of average revenue per room (RevPAR) by 0.02%. And, while that may not sound particularly significant, it means that every time Airbnb’s supply doubles (which is its average yearly pace since inception) hotel revenues fall 2%.² Therefore, there is reason to believe the vacation rental category is beginning to pose a threat to traditional lodging properties. This study explores how to better understand the decision process of those who rent vacation homes and what impact this may have in the Florida Keys.

Florida Keys Vacation Home Rental Research

Executive Summary
The Florida Keys is a Vacation Home Rental Destination

- Target Travelers are a good mix of vacation rental customers and prospects. This study includes a good mix of vacation home rental users and prospects. That is, 33% used a vacation home rental on their last trip, 41% have used a rental in the past (but not on their last trip) and 26% are considerers who are open to vacation home rental but have never done so. The top vacation home rental brands include: Airbnb, VRBO and HomeAway.

- More likely to rent a vacation home in the Florida Keys. Target Travelers indicated they were more likely to rent a vacation home in the Florida Keys than any other destination in the competitive set. More than four in five Target Travelers indicated they are most likely to rent a vacation home at a beach destination (83%), and the Florida Keys was identified as the destination Target Travelers would be most likely to rent a vacation home in of any other destinations evaluated.

- Convenience, space and affordability are key. These three characteristics are those considered most important among Target Travelers when evaluating potential accommodations. And, those most likely to rent vacation homes are further differentiated from those who prefer traditional lodging by the availability of kitchens and balconies.

Florida Keys is a popular destination among Target Travelers. Nearly one third (30%) of Target Travelers have visited the Florida Keys in the past and 43% intend to do so in the near future. This places the Florida Keys in second place for both incidence and intent to visit—second only to Southeast Florida/Miami/Palm Beach—and topping the Caribbean, Southern California, Mexico, Bahamas and Hawaii. Intent to visit is comparatively strong across all of the Florida Keys territories but runs stronger than average for Key West and Key Largo.

Relaxation and Escape. These Target Travelers indicate their primary motivation for visiting the Florida Keys would be for “Rest and Relaxation,” with “Adventure Seeking” coming in as a distant second.

Vacation home rental poses threat to traditional lodging in the Florida Keys. Target Travelers who want to visit the Florida Keys have nearly the same intent to consider a vacation home rental as they do traditional lodging accommodations. Intent runs 73% for vacation home rentals compared to 72% average for chain/independent hotels. And, when forced to choose, more would choose vacation home rentals (41%) over traditional lodging (33%)—and the same is true among past visitors (43% vs. 33% respectively).
Barriers to Using Traditional Accommodations

▪ Travel planning sources. Given the nature of the target market in this study, it is of little surprise that vacation rental websites are considered the resource Target Travelers would be most likely to consult when planning destination visits, followed by visiting with friends and family, searching the internet and visiting online travel review sites. The most common social media sites included Facebook and YouTube, while TripAdvisor and Yelp are the most common online communities used by this segment.

▪ Decision to drive or fly is a 50/50 proposition. Roughly half (49%) of the Target Travelers in this study indicate they prefer to drive to their preferred destinations—about the same number who prefer to fly (48%). Florida Keys’ visitors in particular say they are 23% more likely than average to prefer flying to their destination and 22% more likely than average to fly to a nearby destination and renting a car.

▪ Barriers to traditional accommodations. The primary stated barriers to using traditional accommodations are the lack of kitchen facilities, not having the space they need for their party, lack of privacy, affordability and mandatory resort fees. However, when these factors are correlated with intent to visit, it is revealed that better explanations for not using traditional accommodations are that social media conversations have been unconvincing, been there done that, a lack of authenticity and a lack of privacy.

Barriers to Lodging & Visitation

Florida Keys Vacation Home Rental Research
Target Travelers who use non-traditional lodging have a variety of reasons for doing so, including more personal experiences, wanting something new and accommodating large parties.

“Airbnb has a better variety of choices. Sometimes it’s a lot cheaper than hotels and sometimes it has a better feeling than a hotel.”

“I think you can get a more personal experience by using Airbnb and renting from somewhere that isn’t typical.”

“Non-traditional lodging is usually cheaper, more welcoming, and more adventurous.”

“Because I’m always using traditional lodging. And for once I’d like to do something out side of the norm. Something different.”

“I prefer to be immersed into the locality and chain hotels makes that difficult to do. Chain hotels tend to be more expensive.”

“It will not efficiently accommodate to my family and would be more expensive to rent two rooms, versus one vacation home.”

“We like to cook and having a kitchen is helpful. We also have several children and need a washer and dryer.”

Q38: You indicated previously that you are not likely to use traditional lodging (i.e. chain hotels, independent hotels, bed & breakfasts, timeshares, campgrounds, etc.) if you were to visit the Florida Keys. Why not? Please be specific.

Q30: How likely would you be to rent from each of the following types of lodging in the Florida Keys?
Q31: Which type of lodging would you be most likely to select for a stay in the Florida Keys?
Target Travelers plan their accommodations in a myriad of ways, including online research, considering pet accommodations, safety, proximity to restaurants and more.

“Depends on the number of persons who are vacationing. If just me and my spouse we generally get a hotel, extended family requires a larger housing unit so we tend to rent a home.”

“How I decide which type of lodging I most likely use is I plan ahead and also I look on websites and apps to find places.”

“I like to look for good prices, safe locations, and locations that are convenient in terms of distance from fun activities.”

“I look at various hotel sites to compare prices. Then I go look at Airbnb and HomeAway, etc. and compare those to the hotel prices I have gathered. Then I look at my vacation budget to see if any fit in it, and if not I call my cousins to see who’s available.”

“I research the options and choose one with large rooms, swimming pool and close proximity to activities and dining options.”

“If it takes pet, has free parking and a breakfast. Like it to have good ratings, clean and a good value for my money. Employees need to be neat in appearance and friendly; they actually like their job. Safety is very important!”

“Like to stay in a place that has local flavor and where I can meet and get to know local people, since they are the best source of recommendations for restaurants and things to do.”

Q32: How do you decide which type of lodging you are most likely to use? Please be as detailed as possible.
